Caught in the cross-hairs of a twisted fanatic... Poverty, broken families and a system ill-equipped to help innocent and impressionable children combine to create an ideal breeding ground for Usman who is recruiting and training missionaries for mass destruction. While completing her thesis in India, Tina Matthew, a young doctoral student from the United States, unwittingly gets thrown into the center of this madman's demented plot built upon religious fanaticism. She quickly learns what the classroom cannot teach as she experiences first hand how Usman executes his mission with crazed religious righteousness, violence and the psychological manipulation of human trafficking victims. "A fascinating story with a suspenseful plot and rich with characters you care about and root for until the end." – Holly Mckenna, Professional Media Lecturer, University at Albany "Subramanian has a grasp of the complexity and depth of issues related to human trafficking and terrorism." – Dr. Rudy Nydegger, Ph. D., Chief, Division of Psychology, Ellis Hospital "An affecting read which delves into the intricacies of a terrorist's mind." – Nikhil Sharda, Managing Editor – eFiction India "I was hooked to the novel right from the prologue!" – Inez Bracy, Inez Bracy International, Living Smart and Well-Online Radio
