Our Regiment: A History of the 102D Illinois Infantry Volunteers, With Sketches of the Atlanta Campaign, the Georgia Raid, and the Campaign of the Carolines (Classic Reprint) S. F. Fleharty

In presenting this book to the public, it is not claimed that Our Regiment was in any special way distinguished above more than a hundred organizations of the kind, sent into the field by our noble State. The field of active service was one of common suffering and common danger, and all the regiments that participated in the work of suppressing the rebellion, will be honored according to their deeds, by the people whom they served. In preparing the manuscript I have had frequent occasions to refer to the diaries of Capt. J. Y. Merritt, Lt. Byron Jordan and Sergt. T. M. Bell. Their kindness in permitting me to use them is gratefully acknowledged. Numerous extracts have been made from productions of my own pen; published in the form of newspaper correspondence, at intervals while in the service. For many expressions of good will, and for material aid in the enterprise of publishing the History, the officers and soldiers of the regiment have my sincere thanks. S. F. F. Galesburg, Ill., Aug. 11th, 1865.
